Third day morg 2/19. I went to bed with some cough - feeling the cold & discouraged - but I have been favoured with a night of enjoyable repose & really feel the benefit of change of air - A precious time after the reading with the widow Port & her 5 children - Surely the Lord condescends to be with us here - & Praises is most abundantly his due - I am living a day at a time - more than ever before perhaps! Evening. Pleasant visits to Jerusha - passed by the house now occupied by Elias Hicks - my visits to Wm. Hebe Willis & Dr. Anna where we dined, & in the afternoon 2 or 3 hours tea at Wm & Anna W Willis's - & their son Edmund. Bodily infirmity is prevalent with these friends - but they are of the right kind indeed - we had comforting opportunities of a religious kind in each house - & here again this evening with Stephen & Phebe Rostmore. Thus the Lord is bestowing freely, of his own goodness, upon us out of an inexhaustible treasury. The gift has flowed this day somewhat independently of the creature - I suppose I shall in due season learn the lesson, that I am absolutely nothing: that the Lord & the Lord's work is every thing - that self must be held of no reputation & that all the praise must be ascribed to them. I have more of the happy feeling of returning health this evening than I have felt before for many weeks.

Flushing Sixth day 2mo 27th. 1839 After the above entry a feverish night - but an excellent mo. meeting with that valuable little community of Friends. I laid before them my concern for their families which was warmly concurred with. Dear Anna W. Willis's testimony of unity, ~~[illegible]~~ sympathetic, & tender was most valuable. On our return to Flushing that evening I had the satisfaction to find dear John Paul who spent 2½ with me - pleasantly - & was with us in our quiet repeating little meeting. Letters of the head Warden bring the serious sorrowful news of the death of my beloved friend & partner J. Martin - There seems though in prospect many mercies, to have been hope & peace in his end. A little hope & confidence arises that my friends at home will ~~[illegible]~~ be enabled to make all needful arrangements - & that nothing will occur to prevent my quietly pursuing my course. I am quite a prisoner here again - not from relapse - but the damp weather - & all concern
