and also in the memory of your red brethren, in this country, for, when I returned home, I explained faithfully to them all that you requested.

"Brothers.

"All you have said to us at and since that period, has been communicated to your red brothers of this country, which has caused them to believe that you are their friends, and wish to relieve them as far as lays in your power.

"Brothers

"Two springs ago you made your appearance here amongst us, and said it pleased the great spirit that you should visit us; which visit is gratefully acknowledged by your red brethren in this country.

"Brothers

"You told us at that time you came to give us all the assistance in your power, and requested us to point out a place where we thought your services would be of most benefit to us; we requested you to go to the place where our friend William Kirk, who is now present, has resided this summer; this place we chose because it was most public, and would afford passengers an opportunity of seeing what was done more than any other we could point out. You then raised a great crop of corn and gave it to your red brethren; the receipt of which was thankfully acknowledged by them.

"Brothers.

"You have now again made your appearance amongst your red brethren in this country; they have listened to your words with attention, and find they correspond with the first words you spoke to us. You told us you came to occupy the same ground that you had occupied two years ago, but did not request us to point out to you at what place your services would be most beneficial, as you did when you first arrived amongst us, which has prevented your red brethren, residing elsewhere, from participating in your services.

"Brothers.

"We believe your intentions towards your red brethren are good, for which we are thankful to you; we hope that the Great Spirit will continue it in your hearts, to relieve your red brethren who are at this time much in want of your aid.

"Brothers.

"We received with pleasure the implements of husbandry you sent us; we have endeavoured to use them; but we have not been able to make a right use of them, for want of some person to teach us how they are used.

"Brothers.

"You are come amongst us as it were this morning, the sun has not yet risen to 12 o'clock; you have not stayed all night with us. The families you have visited amongst us, are well pleased with you, and confidently receive you as their brothers; we therefore, hope you will continue amongst us, as we believe our attachment will increase with the time you are with us."

"The committee have lately received another letter from the Indian agent, in which he says ..... "that the Indians at Dennis's station, as well as those at the Little Turtle's town, eighteen miles north of Dennis's station, are advancing towards civilization, exceeding all that could have been expected."

"We have examined the treasurer's accompts, and find in his hands 219 dollars and 41 cents.

"The committee, in concluding their report, are free to observe, that upon a review of the progress made towards the accomplishment of the object of their appointment, there appears to be great cause of encouragement for friends to persevere in this truly laudable and interesting concern, which has prospered, beyond the expectations of friends, at the time they first engaged in the undertaking; and clearly demonstrates to the discerning mind, that it hath indeed been divinely owned; and no discouragement, or obstruction, now appearing,
