The mind that is introduced into this state, will no longer relish the frivolous or corrupt conversation of the world, nor will it seek enjoyment from the perusal of those pernicious books which are produced by our unchastened imagination and are only calculated to foster the same in others.

An earnest desire was felt that all our members may faithfully maintain our testimony in regard to lotteries; we consider them an evil of great magnitude in our land, being an insidious species of gambling and one that has a powerful tendency to engender an appetite for dishonest gain.

The meeting was introduced into a solemn exercise on the subject of our testimony against slavery, and while we were concerned that all our members may be faithful in regard to this righteous testimony, an earnest solicitude was felt and expressed that we may both as a society and individually keep ourselves unconnected with the excitement now so generally prevailing in our land, and be careful to maintain our principles in the meek and peaceable spirit of the Lamb, and that we avoid committing ourselves by entering into combinations with those whose motives we do not understand.
