

The number of scholars has increased, untill they had at the last term, and have commenced the present with many pupils as could be comfortably accommodated, the average number being about fifty.

As a misapprehension seems to exist in the minds of some Friends with regard to the gratuitous scholarship, the committee will state that scholars who are taken on behalf of the Yearly Meeting, are such as contemplate engaging in teaching at least for a time, and who, while they have already a tolerably good education, are permitted to spend one term at Fair Hill without charge, in order that they may thus become qualified to be more useful to the young persons who may be placed under their care, and that in this manner the bounty of the Yearly Meeting through that institution of learning, may be more widely diffused.

The committee has been informed that all who have been thus educated are now engaged in teaching, and that the Friends who have charge of the School, will be willing at the next term to receive two pupils of the description above spoken of.

Timely application should be made to the clerk of the Committee.

On behalf of the Committee

Richard J. Bently Clerk
