

Elder. His last illness was tedious, and attended with sharp affliction, in all which he was preserved in exemplary patience, being much tried, as he expressed, with poverty in the fore part thereof, yet was at times favoured with a renewal of strength and a resignation of his will, being often in a weighty frame of mind, his expressions were tendering and instructive, the morning before his departure, appearing sensible his end was near, with great solemnity & composure, said, let all be still: and in a short time quietly departed on the 26th of the 8th mo 1784. in the 42^d year of his age and was buried in friends burying ground at Third-

Third-haven, the 28th of the same
