

The next day she movingly broke forth with the following portion of scripture "Comfort ye, comfort ye my People, saith your God. speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned; for she hath received of the Lords hands double for all her sins."

And some time after further expressed that the Lord had happily sealed her Peace, and in thankful Praises she rejoiced therein, and said, Oh! how sweet I feel, I feel perfectly easy—some poor souls are trying all their lives to get to Heaven, and how hard they find it, whilst others are at ease and take little care about it, adding, "those whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth."

Once

Once on eating a little Bread she said, how many poor afflicted ones I have given Bread to, I could not see them want whilst in my Power, which is now a great comfort to me. And often expressed her concern for the youth, saying, "By whom shall Jacob arise for he is very small." and dropped many lively exhortations to her Children, Friends, and others who came to visit her.

On a number of Friends being present she said, this is a trying time, all things must appear clear, adding, We have often been favoured together with that sweet uniting power of Truth which was always precious to me. At another time after sitting in a solid frame of mind she broke forth, saying, Oh! the love I feel that flows thro' Jesus Christ, which none can feel but those who believe in him.

at