

her bodily strength was much reduced the power of true Religion preserved her lively in her intellectual Faculties, and enabled her to shew an instructive pattern of meekness, patience, resignation and extensive love to her fellow members, and others, often intimating that she ~~she~~ had a foretaste of that joy and happiness, which crowns the latter end of the redeemed, and only waited the Lords time to be released from her enfeebled mortal state, to participate thereof with others who were gone before.

Towards the conclusion of her time she appeared to have a clear sense, that her departure drew near, and the morning of her decease expressed, in a broken tender manner her desires, that her descendants and others might endeavour so to live, that when they came to a death bed, they might be favoured with the same clear prospect she then had of enjoying a state of rest and happiness forever

She quietly departed on the 25th of the 8th month 1790. and was interred in Friends burying ground at Little Falls meeting house in Harford County the 27th of the same aged near 80 years
