

148 her fellow members and others, counsel, exhortation and comfort, with undiminished weight and gospel authority.

In her last illness, she endured her sufferings, which were at times severe, with a good degree of fortitude and resignation; often expressing the sweet composure and serenity of her feelings, and her gratitude to the author of her being for many particular favours conferred through the course of a long life. She expressed entire resignation either in life or death, often declaring how happy she was, and saying, "I am at times able to sing that holy song, Glory to God in the highest, on earth, peace and good will to men". - Edwards

149 the close of her life, she appeared rather anxious for her departure and at one time was heard to say, "Painful are my days, O Lord, and wearisome my nights, nevertheless they will be done, both in life and death; if more suffering is allotted to me, do thou sustain me in it, that thy name in all things may be glorified". -

She departed this life on the 28th of the 3rd month, 1823, in the 81st year of her age, leaving her friends and relatives in a well grounded hope, that she had entered into the merciful rest.
