The remaining Queries and Answers were read, and, on considering the state of Society thus exhibited by the report, many minds were introduced into feeling exercise on account of acknowledged deficiencies, especially in the attendance of our religious meetings. Impressive exhortations to greater watchfulness and faithfulness in this important duty were affectionately handed forth, and the encouraging promises voiced; "When two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." Young mothers were tenderly invited to firmness and faithfulness in training their infant children in the simplicity and moderation of our holy denying profession. The youthful class was also exhorted to the remembrance of the Apostolic injunction, "Reck not taste not of that which might draw away their minds from the spirituality of our mode of worship; knowing that not one of our precious testimonies can be disregarded without an injury to our high and holy profession of the truth as it is in God."
