brought messages of hope and inspiration coming, as they did, from the very depths of her experience, accompanied by the radiance of her face and the expression of her voice. Her habit of daily Bible reading and communion with her Heavenly Father in the early hours of the morning deepened her spiritual life and added to her usefulness to others.

It was a great disappointment to her when she ceased to be able to regularly attend meetings at Bethel and to participate in the worship and activities there. She often gathered her family circle around her for worship, and when she knew there was a meeting being held at Bethel she was with them in spirit. In some mysterious way she was able to set free streams of spiritual power in others which enabled them to reach heights far beyond their original aspiration.

We give thanks for her beautiful life among us and rejoice in her entry into the fuller Life.
