

MEMORIAL

Clarence J. Robinson, son of James L. and Sallie G. Robinson, answered his Master's summons on June 16, 1959 at his home "The Orchards" where he had spent his entire life except the years at George School and Swarthmore College.

He was a birthright member of Hopewell Monthly Meeting and was one of the most active, efficient, and faithful members. He served as teacher of his First-day school class and on many committees at various times all through the years, some of which were: Representative on the Central Committee of Friends' General Conference, Yearly Meeting Executive Committee (Stony Run), Yearly Meeting Joint Peace Committee, Potomac Quarterly Meeting Finance Committee, Monthly Meeting Advancement Committee, Monthly Meeting Funeral Committee.

Quiet and retiring in nature, he was content to help those who knew him so well and loved him for his kindness and uprightness of life.

A useful life cannot be measured in length of time, but in friendliness, noble ideals and Christian character. Clarence J. Robinson led a full, useful life. He was an actively concerned Friend. When matters arose that needed his attention his devoted concern saw to it that something was done about it. Many times he did it himself, very satisfactorily, and often so quietly few knew it had been done, but Clarence had seen it through. Many expenses were met sooner because Clarence J. Robinson had reached into his pocket far beyond that which was expected of one individual..
