Hoge to form a standing committee for one year to arrange (with the friends residing where the Quarterly Meeting meets) for the holding of conferences, should way open for it. It suggests that at the Quarterly Meeting held in 1st Mo in Baltimore, the conference should form an integral part of the Q. M. which should adjourn and hold an evening session for it. and that the same should be the case at the autumn Q. M. when the Q. M. would hold its first session on 2nd day evening.

MEMORIAL OF BALTIMORE MONTHLY MEETING OF FRIENDS, CONCERNING JAMES CAREY THOMAS, A MINISTER.

The following memorial of our late Friend, Dr. James Carey Thomas, is placed on record, in the hope that by this means his life may continue to be an inspiration to many who can no longer feel the influence of his voice and presence. The head of a large family, a beloved physician, a public-spirited citizen, and a Christian worker and minister of the Gospel, he consecrated his personal gifts to the service of his day and generation:

He was born in Baltimore the 8th of Seventh month, 1833. His father, the late Richard H. Thomas, was a leading physician in the city and a prominent minister in our religious Society. Travelling Friends from other parts of the country and from abroad were always welcome in his old-fashioned family mansion, and thus the boy was early brought into contact with strong and varied Christian influences. His mother, Martha Carey Thomas, who died when he was very young, also had a deep religious experience, and he used to say that the memory of her parting blessing shortly before she died remained with him through his life. After attending the best schools in Baltimore, James Carey Thomas spent about three years at Haverford College, where he was graduated in 1851. While there he formed many lasting friendships with companions of his own age, and one at least with an older friend, Charles Yarnall, a prominent Friend of Philadelphia, who was attracted by the enthusiasm and literary interests of the young student, and did much to foster the love and knowledge of the best authors, which broadened and enriched his after life. On returning to Baltimore he studied medicine in the University of Maryland, where his father was a professor, and after receiving
