

of the mob, but who must suffer because they are members of the community in which the violence was shown.

Certain newspapers have called upon you to lead in bringing the offenders promptly to justice. Speedy and certain enforcement of law is always desirable, but even enforcement of law has its limitation. We believe that it is fundamentally important that the thought and feeling of the people of the state be raised to a level where such deeds will be impossible. We look to you for leadership in the creation of such sentiment and pledge our best effort to that end.

Yours respectfully,

Edna Goodwin.
